Not illustrated. 1892 Excerpt: .that we are strangers and pilgrims in this sphere; that we are hastening through it; and that our real home is with God, and with the heavenly host. May we not count ourselves unworthy of this greater life. Though we be in poverty here, though we be in degradation or disesteem, though we be neglected or in contempt, we desire to forget never that we are sons of God. In the midst of suffering and trial and conflict, and all the things that men call disasters, we still desire to walk worthy of our vocation. Be pleased to give us this inward strength. Gird us every day for the conflict of life. Give us patience every day. Give us faith and insight every day. Every day give us courage and hope, and some song of rejoicing. Though our feet be in fetters, though the prison be closed around about us, and the guards be set over us, may we sing songs in the night, and find an angel of deliverance. We pray that our whole life, though it must be a life of conflict, may be a life of ascending, so that by and by, in years to come, we may stand on heights of experience, looking forth as from the land of Beulah, and discerning the sacred city. Though we cannot with our ears hear the songs of the redeemed, yet in our hearts we discern them--we know their welcoming call. Grant, we pray thee,...
