Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Selected Critical Bibliography of Vocational Guidance, Vol. 4 This bibliography is intended to be sufficiently broad in scope to give any reader an opportunity to select material adapted to his special needs, and sufficiently thorough to provide for an intensive study in any department of the subject. Some references deal with the educational theory back of the movement, but an attempt is also made, particularly in Parts II and III, to indicate the answer to the question, What practical vocational guidance can be offered in school and in occupation? Vocational guidance has been conceived broadly, as concerning itself with all the steps in the occupational progress of the individual: laying a foundation of many kinds of useful experiences, studying occupational opportunities, choosing the occupation, preparing for the vocation, entering upon work, and making necessary readjustments and progress in the occupation. For this reason references on related subjects are included as suggesting typical writings in fields with which the student of vocational guidance must make himself familiar. Part IV is primarily concerned with references on the social and economic characteristics of occupations; without a study of these fields the teacher is not fitted to counsel and the worker is not equipped to cope with the problems of the complex occupational life of today. Naturally, since vocational guidance is first of all an educational problem, its prosecution, whether in school or occupation, must be carried on by means of painstaking study and investigation. On this account certain titles are omitted from this bibliography. Vocational guidance is not concerned with any system of character analysis, phrenology, physiognomy, or other short cuts. Neither is it concerned with bombastic...
